

UNIQUE SOCIAL LEARNING WEBSITE LAUNCHED TO 7 MILLION STUDENTS

News: 16th July 2012

MarkedbyTeachers.com, a unique social learning website for students, has been launched today by The Student Room Group - Taking it straight out to the group's 7 million + monthly visitors.

MarkedbyTeachers.com contains the largest accessible body of student work in the UK with over 150,000 samples of student essays. The brightest students in the country, organised into peer review panels, help each other learn from it through highly structured reviews. Experienced teachers (including department heads, examiners and published authors) then take samples of work across all subject areas and levels, and write full marking comments for students, as well as providing handy learning tips for each of their subjects.

On the launch Pete Taylor, Director of Marked byTeachers.com says "MarkedbyTeachers.com is a massive evolution from the website it replaces (Coursework.Info) and really demonstrates the value of social learning in education. It is the first and only website to offer reviews from teachers and A* students and has received an amazingly positive reaction from teachers and education bodies across the UK."

Val Shore, Examiner for A-Level English Literature says: "MarkedbyTeachers.com provides the informed, concise and targeted tutorial support students need to help them achieve their full potential"

For £4.99 a month or £37.50 for an annual pass, students can access and download unlimited items from the site or upload their own work to receive free access to the database – ensuring no student in the country is denied access, whatever their financial position.

Ends

For media information: Hearson Communications

Email: Camilla@hearsoncommunications.com

Twitter: @HearsonComms

Notes to Editors:

- The Student Room Group nurtures the largest and most useful online community for UK students, and encourages students to help each other with education and lifestyle support from GCSEs to the end of university.
- TheStudentRoom.co.uk (sometimes known as TSR) is the largest student community in the world, receiving around 5.5 million visitors a month. Students aged 14-26 meet to get support, socialise, discuss and proactively research their academic choices, career decisions and every other aspect of life. In the past, discussions between students and the Prime Minister have been held as well as with the leaders of all the main political parties. The Student Room was also named as the UK's fastest growing online SME in 2011 by Experian.
- The Student Room Group also contains TSR Learning - its social learning tools division which produces web based learning tools that build on the power of students helping other students outside of the classroom.
- TSR Learning consists of GetRevising.co.uk and MarkedbyTeachers.com. Get Revising adds a host of brilliant social learning resources which are used across the Group to help students learn. Founded in 2008 by teacher Peter Langley, Get Revising has grown to offer over 600,000 students support with their exam preparation. Students can create revision timetables and share academic word searches, revision cards, notes and quizzes.
- Each piece of work uploaded to MarkedbyTeachers.com is provided to TurnItIn, the plagiarism prevention tool used by almost all UK universities and exam boards.